This program is written in Python, and I am using an external library called "dnspython."

To run the code, you can simply go to the directory that contains the python file in the command prompt and type "py mydig.py" followed by the domain name you wish to resolve, for example, "py mydig.py google.com." You might need to change the "py" command to "python" depending on the version of python installed in your device.